soil composition: calcareous loess with gravel elevation: 780 ft
exposure: south-west average age of vines: 30 years

the vineyard

Ried Haidacker is dominated by loess soils with inclusions of Danube gravel in the upper layers. Facing south-west, the Pannonian climate is dominating the day temperatures, but during the nights cooler winds coming from the north river Danube are freshing up the temperatures. This location strikes a superb balance between freshness and fruity and ripeness and structure - therefore it has been classified as a Premier Cru Carnuntum since 2017.
